Empowering Women to Serve

This issue of the Spelman Messenger highlights dozens of alumnae who are serving their communities and the nation through public service. From elected officials, to policy advocates, to government administrators, to political organization leaders, Spelman women have claimed their power in order to create a better world.

We are proud of these alumnae – and proud of the role Spelman has played in their development. As Stacey Abrams, C'95, who ran a historic campaign in Georgia to be our country's first African-American female governor, said: "Spelman teaches women how to leverage and deploy their power."

For 138 years, empowering Black women has been this institution's sacred charge. Spelman is the place where Spelmanites choose their values and discover their truth.

Spelman creates an environment where, surrounded by other young women, challenged by their faculty, our students learn to think critically, ask questions and, if necessary, fearlessly disrupt the status quo. Their years at Spelman provide the time and space to think, discover and affirm who they are and what really matters to them.

For 138 years, Spelman has been the place where our students can develop a vision.

We challenge our young women to have big visions – global views of life that include an awareness of what's going on in the world, deep knowledge about issues, and opinions informed with evidence about the challenges humankind faces, as well as the possibilities for change.

Spelman's rigorous liberal arts education offers a range of opportunities to learn – inside the classroom, through innovative curricula and research, and outside the classroom, through internships, community service and study abroad.

For 138 years, Spelman has been the place where our students learn to speak up and speak out, not only on behalf of their individual needs but on behalf of each other and their communities.

Dr. Johnnetta B. Cole used to tell the entering class at Spelman: "Look to your left, look to your right. Make sure that both of those women are with you, when you graduate." Our Spelmanites are ambitious for themselves and even more ambitious for each other and their communities, the mark of real leaders. Please join me in celebrating the women of Spelman who have devoted their lives to public service and the welfare of their communities, their country and the world.

CELEBRATING OUR RIGHTS OF CITIZENSHIP

BY CYNTHIA NEAL SPENCE, C'78, PH.D.

Spelman College, founded in 1881, just 13 years after ratification of the 14th Amendment, created a space for those not considered by the amendment – Black women and girls. Our institution has historically prepared young women of African descent for the promise and full actualization of the rights of citizenship.

As we consider our place in history as an institution dedicated to the education of women, Spelman College stands as a reflection of and testimony to that first class of students in 1881 and their families who had probably hopefully imagined what ratification of the 14th Amendment should mean to all persons of African descent if its tenets were actualized and woven into the fabric of laws and policies in America. The families of the first class of Spelman College students undoubtedly had stories to tell about experiences of family members whose dreams of education were thwarted by the people, social conditions, and dominant ideas about the place of Black people at the time.

The 14th Amendment of 1868 and its companion Reconstruction amendments – the 13th Amendment of 1865 (abolishing slavery except as punishment for conviction of a crime) and the 15th Amendment of 1870 (granting the right to vote to Black males) – must be analyzed together as we examine the lives of Blacks prior to their adoption as part of the United States Constitution. While Black women sought the rights guaranteed by the Constitution, the devaluation of all women, but particularly Black women's agency and rights as citizens, was not considered.

An invested belief and commitment to White supremacy made the lives of Blacks throughout the South subject to organized terror campaigns. Of particular note is the fact that the mid-1800s was a very violent time for Black men and women throughout the South as Confederate leaders and sympathizers took out their frustrations against newly freed Blacks. Seeking the promise of the 14th Amendment became a rallying call for all concerned. The very founding of Spelman College became an act of social justice against this backdrop.

The right of Black women and girls to be educated was not in the language of the 14th Amendment, but the call for Black women and girls to reap the full benefits of citizenship guided all responsible for the College's founding.

Spelman College continues to educate young women in the face of perennial challenges not automatically protected by the 14th Amendment's equal protection under the law clause. Ironically, voting rights, equal rights for women, and violence against women continue to be areas in need of strong and sustained social justice advocacy. It is even more important today to recognize and challenge the tenets of White supremacy and to prepare our students to continue to demand and seek equal protection under the law. Not only do we prepare our women to exercise their full rights as citizens, we also prepare them to seek social justice for those whose rights have been denied because of marginalization or disenfranchisement.

CELEBRATING THE 150TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE 14TH AMENDMENT

To commemorate the 150th anniversary of the 14th Amendment, the Thurgood Marshall Institute at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund and Spelman College hosted a keynote conversation between Sherrilyn Ifill, president and director-counsel of the NAACP LDF, and Melissa Harris-Perry, Maya Angelou Presidential Chair at Wake Forest University.

The future of our democracy and the need for everyday citizens to help fulfill the full power and promise of the 14th Amendment to safeguard our civil rights and ensure access to justice for all led the night's conversation.

PROFESSOR'S RED LIGHT THERAPY RESEARCH AIMS TO CHANGE LIVES

BY CONNIE GREEN FREIGHTMAN

While participating in a U.S. Air Force Summer Faculty Research Program in 2016, Spelman College associate professor of biology Tiffany Oliver, Ph.D., became intrigued with studying red light therapy.

Since then, her research has focused on ways to extend the benefits of red light treatment to heal wounds, relieve joint pain, increase hair growth, and reverse the signs of aging.

In fall 2018, Oliver was awarded a $450,000, three-year grant by the U. S. Department of Defense's Research and Education Grant for HBCUs and the Office of Naval Research to continue her innovative work in the field.

Although red light therapy has been around for decades, the treatment has become increasingly popular in recent years, as studies have confirmed its medical and cosmetic benefits.

Also known as photobiomodulation, red light therapy works at the cellular level by delivering specific wavelengths of light to boost energy production in cells. This causes cells to function more efficiently and rejuvenate themselves to stimulate the process of healing.

"So while we have seen the positive physiological effects of red light exposure for some time, no one has identified the biological pathways that facilitate these effects," Oliver said. "This is where my research comes in. We are specifically interested in treatments that can be used to prevent cell death and that can promote wound healing."

Four Spelman students are working with her on the project. While she offers guidance, Oliver also encourages her students to pursue their own research approaches.

"I think this scientific freedom is important for students' scientific self-efficacy," said Oliver, who's taught at Spelman for nearly eight years. "I hope it teaches them that there's more than one way to do something, and that it encourages innovation and creativity."

Health science major Victoria Brown, C'2019, has worked with Oliver on the red light therapy project since 2017. The aspiring scientist has found the research experience transformational.

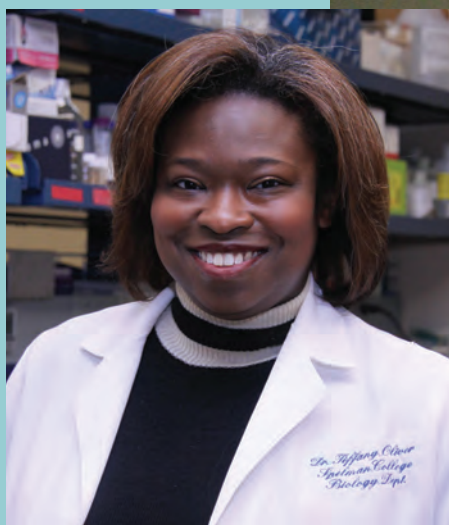

"Doing research has taken my educational experience to the next level because it builds upon foundational knowledge in a way that only firsthand experience can," said Brown, who wants to work in public health. "I've gained so much confidence in my ability to be a scientist, and will take that confidence with me in my journey post-Spelman."

Oliver and her student researchers have almost finished the first goal of her grant – to identify the biological pathways of red light healing. The next step is to use the data to find ways to extend the therapeutic benefits.

"The project has been going great. One of the objectives of the College's strategic plan is to 'Elevate the Spelman Difference' by facilitating undergraduate research across the College with the ultimate goal of supporting positive student outcomes," Oliver said. "One way the College has supported my current research is by providing the necessary infrastructure. Without this infrastructure, it would be very difficult to provide a convincing argument for funding from government agencies like the U.S. Department of Defense."

ADW'S 25TH ANNIVERSARY

BY MELODY GREENE, C'2020

African Diaspora and the World, or ADW as it is known at Spelman College, helps first-year students dive into their African heritage, as well as illuminate the effects the dispersion had on the world. The required class for every Spelman scholar was created to help students develop a perception of themselves as citizens of a changing and increasingly compressed world.

“African Diaspora and the World is centered on the experiences of African-descended people,” said Pushpa Parekh, Ph.D., chair of ADW. “[The class] speaks to our students’ experiences as Black women. They learn about themselves, their history and their place in the African Diaspora and the world.”

There is a cadre of 26-plus interdisciplinary faculty who currently teach ADW courses each semester. “It is kudos to their hard work, diligence, and vision, as well as of our founding faculty, that we continue to maintain the reputation of the program as challenging, rigorous, and meaningful for our students, as they embark upon their diverse academic and life journeys,” said Parekh.

Twenty-five years ago, Michael Gomez, Ph.D., then chair of the history department, and other faculty members wanted to create a space at Spelman where students could connect with their history and the world in new ways. As a result of their early pioneering efforts, ADW was born. Unlike an average African-American or African history class, ADW differs because it delves specifically into the period when Africans were stripped from their homeland and forced to take long, exhausting journeys to other continents. The course explores the various ways Africans were enslaved depending on their final destination, and how the world operates today because of the African Diaspora.

“[When you leave ADW], you have become more self-aware, more socially conscious, more knowledgeable and more confident,” said Hanan Davis, C'2012, adjunct music and ADW professor at Spelman. “You have been forever changed for the better.”

At Spelman, the hope is that the class expands the perceptions students have about themselves and their ancestry. Also, it offers them a global perspective of the African Diaspora.

RESEARCH DAY

Celebrating 30 Years of Exemplary Achievement

BY TIERRA MCCLAIN, C'2021

On April 25, 2019, Spelman’s Research Day will hit a spectacular milestone as the annual day of research and scholarship celebrates its 30th anniversary. This year, through the theme, “Spelman for Spelman: Acknowledge, Abide, Aspire,” students will be able to showcase their dedication to moving their respective disciplines forward by presenting their undergraduate research. In 1989, Research Day, then known as “Science Day,” was created to represent the caliber of students in the natural sciences. However, by 2005, the event was solidified as “Research Day” and now involves representation from every department at Spelman College.

Now, each year, hundreds of Spelman students participate in Research Day, representing over 25 disciplines in the STEM, social sciences, arts and humanities. This year’s Research Day will be co-chaired by Spelman faculty Michelle Hite, Ph.D., assistance professor in English, Tiffany Oliver, Ph.D., associate professor in biology, Erin Washington, lecturer in theater and performance, and Unislawa Williams, Ph.D., associate professor in political science. In celebration of the program’s 30th anniversary, this year’s theme seeks to honor the legacy of students and alumnae who have shown exemplary achievement and promise in their respective fields. “Spelman for Spelman: Acknowledge, Abide, Aspire recognizes the role our past and present Spelman students have had in moving these disciplines forward,” said Hite. “It aims to inspire our students and alumnae to continue on their current trajectory, as well as to continue to abide in the sisterhood that has functioned to help rank Spelman College among the top liberal arts colleges in the nation.” For more information, visit www.spelman.edu/researchday.

CELEBRATING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE DUAL DEGREE ENGINEERING PROGRAM

BY JANA HOBSON, C'2019

This year marks the 50th anniversary of the Atlanta University Center Consortium's dual-degree engineering program. Created to increase the number of minorities entering engineering and technology, DDEP was first established in 1969 when Morehouse College entered a dual-degree relationship with Georgia Institute of Technology.

In 1970, Clark College, Morris Brown College, and Spelman College entered the agreement, which became known as the Atlanta University Center-Georgia Tech Dual Degree Program in Engineering. Currently, the program consists of AUC Consortium member institutions Clark Atlanta University, Morehouse College and Spelman College.

"I think our program provides students with not only the support to become who they want to be, but it also addresses a field that is underrepresented by women," said Retina Burton, Spelman College director of DDEP, and director of the Office of Science, Engineering and Technical Careers. "It also provides a diverse pathway to a number of engineering institutions and not one particular school."

Since DDEP's formation, the College has formed partnerships with more than 15 partner engineering institutions, including North Carolina A&T State University and Georgia Tech, the nation's top-producing schools for African-American engineering graduates. The AUC Consortium DDEP's mission is to expand the number of engineers of color who are "well-equipped for scientific, technological, engineering and mathematical careers."

"I think DDEP is a dynamic program in that it addresses a need for African-Americans in general, and women specifically, in the field of engineering," said Burton, who has served 14 years as DDEP director. "Women are underrepresented, making up only 20 percent of graduating engineers and 13 percent in the workforce, and that's not considering only women of color – that's women in general."

With a background as an electrical engineer, Burton is very familiar with not only the curriculum but also the industry that students will enter once they graduate. She has been fortunate to serve as the academic adviser for all pre-engineering students, in addition to teaching the pre-engineering courses, managing the program, and serving as the liaison between Spelman College and engineering partners – corporate and academic.

She envisions DDEP not only continuing to grow and expand, but also that students will continue to make outstanding marks in the field of engineering. To Burton, the 50th anniversary of DDEP means sustained excellence and an opportunity for future growth and transformation over time.

"The program being around for 50 years speaks of sustainability and continued interest, but most importantly, the holistic development and support our students experience as women of color makes a difference and is invaluable and irreplaceable," said Burton, who is also a senior instructor in physics. "This program gives our students the best of two worlds: a liberal arts and an engineering education contributing to socially conscious problem solving. We believe part of our engineering partners' success as top-producing engineering institutions for African-Americans has to do with DDEP serving as a pipeline providing a steady flow of science, technology, engineering and mathematics-seeking minority students to their engineering doors."

A CORPORATE VISIONARY WHO LEADS WITH INTEGRITY

Pia Wilson-Body Makes an Impact on the Lives of Girls and Women

BY SHANTORIA VANCE, C'2007

Around the globe, Spelman women are industry leaders, and the areas of innovation and technology are no exception. During the 2018 Innovation and Technology Summit, the College highlighted several alumnae and friends who have taken the tech community by storm. Pia Wilson-Body, C'87, president of Intel Foundation, was among those represented. At the close of the summit, Wilson-Body provided insight on how attendees could design their own paths to success and do work that creates opportunities for others.

From her entrance into the Spelman gates as a freshman, to her returning as an alumna who believes in helping others succeed, Wilson-Body said Spelman nurtured and empowered her to follow her dreams. During her closing ceremony interview with President Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., Wilson-Body candidly shared words of wisdom to help graduates gain a leading edge as they transition into corporate environments. She explained that being adaptable, willing to pivot, and being team-oriented are all tools needed to thrive in any workspace. Today, she uses these tools to be a corporate visionary who leads with integrity.

Every day Wilson-Body intentionally drives the mission of Intel to make a global impact in the lives of girls and women in underserved communities. Under her leadership, the foundation continues to create computer science, technology, and engineering enrichment programs worldwide to expose middle- and high-school girls to opportunities in STEM. In 2017, Wilson-Body led the charge for Intel's "She Will Connect USA" initiative. In the first year, this initiative reached 1,500 middle-school girls and their families through fun and interactive education programs focused on innovation and technology. The goal of SWC was to ignite the students' interests in technology, engineering, and computer science before they reached high school. Organizers held the first SWC program in Arizona and expanded to Texas, California, Oregon and Washington in 2018. Wilson-Body wants to expand this opportunity even further with partnerships in the Midwest in the coming years.

This type of work has enabled Intel to collaborate with community-based organizations, civic organizations and nonprofits to take a holistic approach to meeting the needs of program participants. Not only did students receive training in technology, they also received resources to meet their basic needs. SWC USA is one of many programs overseen by Wilson-Body to improve the lives of underrepresented youth.

While the tech industry is demanding and constantly changing, Wilson-Body credits the care and support of her husband to balance it all. "I couldn't have done it without my husband," she said. Despite her demanding schedule, Wilson-Body still takes time to put family first, noting that, "people find time for what they want to do." Seeing her family as a priority, she consistently makes an effort to be present for as much as she possibly can.

As the landscape of technology continues to evolve, Wilson-Body will continue to use her education, training, and influence to cultivate growth and opportunity for others. She encourages future leaders "to be change agents and risk-takers who lead with integrity." These characteristics, she believes, will allow any leader to lead with vision even in times of uncertainty.

STACEY ABRAMS

Spelman's 'Warrior Woman'

BY MAYNARD EATON

“Stacey really represents the Spelman mission. She is a remarkable example of what can be done once you graduate Spelman. We’re a pathway to changing the world.”

– Dorian Crosby, C’91, Ph.D.,
assistant professor of political science,
Spelman College

Abrams receives the Local Community Service Award from President Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D.

ON THE NIGHT SPELMAN HONORED ABRAMS, SPELMAN PRESIDENT MARY SCHMIDT CAMPBELL, PH.D., SAID ABRAMS HAS “ENERGIZED AND INSPIRED” AND “AWAKENED A SENSE OF POSSIBILITY” IN CITIZENS ACROSS GEORGIA.

After nearly winning Georgia’s 2018 gubernatorial race to national acclaim following her historic and riveting rebuttal to President Donald Trump’s 2019 State of the Union Address, Stacey Abrams, C’95, has emerged as a powerful politico and the quintessential Spelman sister.

Had she won, Abrams would have become the first African-American woman governor in the nation. She was also the first Black woman to give the official SOTU response. From 2011 to 2017, the 45-year-old Abrams served as the first African-American Minority Leader of the Georgia House of Representatives.

That’s why Abrams, a magna cum laude graduate, was awarded Spelman’s prestigious Local Community Service Award in January. She has proven to be a politically revered voting rights/civil rights leader with clout and cachet.

On the night Spelman honored Abrams, Spelman President Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., said Abrams has “energized and inspired” and “awakened a sense of possibility” in citizens across Georgia.

“This year we recognize a victor; she is a winner; our very own Spelman sister; our fiercely fearless warrior woman, the magnificent Stacey Abrams,” she opined to thunderous applause from a capacity crowd of Atlanta University Center students, alumnae, and faculty in Spelman’s Sister Chapel.

In accepting the award, Abrams robustly replied: “I mean this sincerely, we won. I may not occupy the governor’s office, but we have made our imprint, and it will grow stronger every single day. We won change; we won opportunity, and we have leaders that now must look over their shoulders every day because we’re coming. We changed the narrative of what it meant to be a leader in America. I didn’t have to change my hair, my gender, or my skin color to be the next governor of the state of Georgia, and 1.9 million people agreed. And, it’s because of you that on Nov. 6, I refused to concede and demanded that every vote be counted. It is because of you that I refused to concede, and I will never say it’s OK to steal our votes.”

During an exclusive interview with the Spelman Messenger, Abrams added: “Spelman teaches women how to leverage and deploy their power. So, the framing of a ‘warrior woman’ is a beautiful notion because it understands that embedded in our sense of who we are is the responsibility to do something for others. We achieved a multiracial, multiethnic coalition unlike anything Georgia has ever seen, and we were only blocked by voting irregularities.”

Soon after that Spelman speech, Abrams catapulted to national political prominence when she was selected to rebut President Trump’s SOTU. “She’s an incredible leader,” said Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-N.Y.) of Abrams. “She’s led the charge for voting rights, which is at the root of just about everything else. If you look at her background, she knows what working-class and middle-class people go through.”

Abrams’ nationally televised, prime-time SOTU response speech was arguably her highest honor to date and admittedly her “largest platform.” Pundits and politicians agree she nailed it.

“Stacey Abrams achieved in a matter of minutes something Donald Trump failed to do in over an hour – to embrace and give voice to the spirit and core values that make America great,” said former Vice President Joe Biden.

“I’m grateful and honored to be a part of how we think about the future of the country,” Abrams told the Spelman Messenger. “The decision to select me reflects work we were able to do here in Georgia; expanding the electorate and making sure every vote counts. Sen. Schumer and Speaker [Nancy] Pelosi understand that about the work that I’ve done, and they want that to be a part of the conversation I have with the country.”

Abrams’ rise to the national political stage began in 1991 when she arrived via MARTA to Spelman College. Spelman was not her first choice. “I was tricked into Spelman by my mother,” she revealed. But she met then-Spelman President Johnnetta Cole, and she saw Morehouse men, she laughs. “She expected us to be women of integrity and to own our power,” she said of Cole.

— Former Vice President Joe Biden

Cynthia Spence, C’78, Ph.D., director of Spelman’s Social Justice Program, got to know Abrams as Spelman’s Student Government Association president and the first Spelman finalist candidate for the renowned Rhodes Scholarship. She echoed others in calling her an eloquent, thoughtful star student.

“I’ve been knowing Stacey was brilliant for a very long time, and that’s rare because we’re surrounded by really smart young women all the time,” said Spence. “She should be where she is now. She is an amazing woman. Just read her resume, and it reads like someone who has made very careful, strategic decisions about where they wanted to end up. Her [SOTU] response is a highlight of her career that will propel her to the next level. It’s just falling right in place.”

Dorian Brown Crosby, C’91, Ph.D., associate professor of political science, worked on Abrams’ gubernatorial campaign. She praises her as poised, phenomenal and passionate, whose riveting words responsibly resonate. Crosby’s parents were both “heavily involved” in Atlanta’s civil rights movement.

“Stacey is raising the awareness and sort of the calling card to the Democratic Party’s base of African-American women,” she said. “I’m elated because she truly represents what Spelman itself stands for. She is really taking the civil rights struggle, which has never ended but just has a different look, into the 21st century. She’s a new warrior equipped with those historical memories.”

Abrams promises to be on the ballot again soon, reportedly possibly running against Georgia Republican Sen. David Perdue in 2020, or maybe as president or on a ticket as vice president.

“I know you don’t have to hold elective office to transform the conversation, and that’s why I’m going to spend every day until I run again, running my mouth,” she vowed. “Elections are moments in time, but we are on a mission. The same way Spelman opened its gates [for me], I intend to open the gates of Georgia so we can all belong.”

Sassy Women Get Things Done

League of Women Voters Celebrates 100 Years of Advocacy

BY TOM KERTSCHER

A record number of women were elected to Congress in 2018, and primarily because of that, a record number of women are now serving in Congress. Also, mostly because of elections in 2018, a record number of women are currently serving in state legislatures across the country.

At the same time, it took nearly 100 years for a woman to be elected speaker of the House – Nancy Pelosi, 2007. And, of course, the country has still not elected a woman president.

So, with 2019 being the 100th anniversary of the federal women’s suffrage amendment being passed by Congress, just how much progress have women made since gaining the right to vote?

“Some,” said Celina Stewart, C’2001, director of advocacy and litigation for the League of Women Voters. “We’ve accomplished a lot, but there’s so much more work to do because we still don’t have parity,” Stewart said, noting that women still make up a much larger percentage of the U.S. population than they do its elected officials. “This is great,” she said of where women stand after the 2018 elections. “We are halfway there, but we have quite a bit more work to do.”

Stewart was drawn to advocacy work when she was a child, not long after she learned that at one time in America, women didn’t have the right to vote.

“My parents always raised us to be pretty empowered and to speak up when you see things that don’t sit right with you, so I was really shocked,” Stewart recalled. “And that was around the time I became very clear that I wanted to become an attorney. I didn’t want to just talk about issues; I wanted to be able to leverage some way to impact change.”

The 19th Amendment became law in 1920 – the same year the League of Women Voters was created.

Stewart acknowledged that her first impression of the League, while she was at Spelman, was that it seemed to be made up of older White women. But she respected how long the organization had existed and “that, combined with, when I actually met League members, these were some sassy older women. They were not shy,” she said.

Stewart said her time at Spelman also made her sassier – that is, more willing to advocate for change.

“At Spelman, one of the things you learn is to compete with yourself. You’re not competing with the world for accolades; you’re competing with yourself, and you’re driven to be the absolute best you can be,” she said. “I think that’s really important for women, but especially African-American women, because you don’t always find your voice that young. It was a more aggressive push to find your voice at a very young age, 18 or 19 or 20. And the focus at Spelman has always been, what are you going to do not just to impact your life, but how are you going to impact the world?”

Stewart said it’s incumbent on organizations like the League to ensure that the gains women made electorally in 2018 continue.

“Our job is to really make sure we take advantage of this momentum and keep people engaged,” she said. “I think it’s the responsibility of every single one of us, but especially large organizations. Once everyday people are engaged and feel motivated to participate, that’s the only way our democracy is strengthened.”

A One-woman Strategic Thinking Tour de Force

BY RENITA MATHIS

“And here you are, a black unicorn, mythical, mystical, since the day that you were born.”

—2 Chainz’s song “Black Unicorn.”

Kiron Skinner, C’81, Ph.D., is a rare woman. A political savant in the Republican Party, she is known for her ability to think strategically, write prolifically, and speak boldly on issues of policy and national security. Appointed in September to serve as director of Policy Planning and senior adviser to Secretary of State Mike Pompeo, Skinner is the mindpower behind the department’s foreign policy program.

“I’m confident that she will enhance our influence overseas, protect the American people, and promote our prosperity,” said Pompeo in a Wall Street Journal article, also describing Skinner as “a national security powerhouse” and “a one-woman strategic thinking tour de force.”

But, before there was the U.S. State Department, there was a 17-year-old who decided to transfer to Spelman College from Sacramento City College for a chance to “meet lots of guys” who attended next-door institution Morehouse College. However, what she found is what many young women who come to Spelman find – a place created just for her where Black girl magic happens. Yet, SCC would provide a multitude of opportunities. It was there at the tuition-free community college, in Sacramento, California, where Skinner received the Harry S. Truman Scholarship, a prestigious fellowship awarded to high-achieving academic students demonstrating leadership promise and commitment to public service.

During the Truman scholarship ceremony, she met the first of many Spelman sisters. A consummate planner, Skinner sought out the only historically Black college awardee – Pamela Moore, C’81, Ph.D., Spelman’s first Truman recipient.

“She sought me out because she had been accepted at Spelman as a transfer student, and she wanted to make my acquaintance and get to know me,” said Moore, associate dean for Global Engagement and assistant professor for regulatory science in the Office of International Programs and Studies for the Department of Agriculture at the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff. “I was excited to meet her, and we shared common interests – both political science majors – and that’s really the beginning of our friendship.”

The Truman fellowship was a very proud moment for Skinner. “That was important for me because I won it from a community college against [students] from Stanford and Berkeley,” said Skinner, who was also on SCC’s award-winning debate team with teammate Tani Cantil-Sakauye, California’s first Asian-Filipina American and second woman to serve as the state’s chief justice. “That for me was a great harbinger, and it helped pay my Spelman tuition, which was probably about $4,000 at that point.”

Since her Spelman days, Skinner has morphed into someone seen only once before in U.S. history. Condoleezza Rice actually held the office as Secretary of State under the George W. Bush administration. The two women share not only their strategic minds but also their commitment and allegiance to the ideology of the Republican Party.

THE PARTY OF LINCOLN

A political conservative, Skinner says Black America as a whole was once a more politically conservative group. She's right. Abraham Lincoln, America's 16th president, was responsible for ending slavery and thus had the full support of Blacks, which would continue until the 1932 election between then-Republican President Herbert Hoover and Democrat Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"I've always seen the American experience through more conservative lenses, but I see those lenses as not in contradiction to the Black experience but consistent with it," said Skinner, who is currently on leave from Carnegie Mellon University while she serves in the State Department. "I probably have always been socially conservative and politically conservative, even though my parents were civil rights activists in the Bay area, and those views were refining when I was at Spelman, but they became clearer to me when I went to Harvard."

ACADEMIC, SPIRITUAL AND EMOTIONAL GROWTH

But, before Harvard, Skinner grew academically, spiritually, and emotionally under the leadership of then-President Donald Stewart, Ph.D. It was administrators like Stewart who boosted her confidence and provided guidance into graduate school.

"Well, I was always impressed with her as a student. She was outstanding, and I just wanted to cheer her on. I didn't know her that well, but I admired her," said Stewart, Spelman's sixth president who served from 1976-1986. "I now am very pleased to hear that she is in the State Department and not the least bit surprised."

"I did my doctorate at Harvard, and I thought it would be good if she did hers there," Stewart said. "James G. Wilson was my thesis adviser at Harvard, and I told him about Kiron. He was impressed with her as well."

ON TO HARVARD UNIVERSITY

Confident and undaunted, Skinner entered Harvard University at 19. She would solidify her political ideologies at Harvard. There, Skinner received both her master's and doctorate degrees in political science. She cites the likes of professors Joseph Nye Jr. and Robert Keohane as instrumental in her matriculation at Harvard.

"Without them, I wouldn't have gotten through Harvard. They are the leading neoliberal institutionalists in terms of theory and liberal politics," said Skinner, who is the W. Glenn Campbell Research Fellow at Stanford's Hoover Institution, where she is a member of three Hoover Institution projects. "On the more conservative side was Harvey Mansfield, a political theorist and Straussian conservative. I think this combination of great people early on ... [who] were very interested in education and promoting women helped me immensely."

Kiron Kanina Skinner

However, a break from working on her dissertation placed her on a trajectory that would become a defining moment in her life. While doing a yearlong exchange from Harvard at Stanford, Skinner met George Shultz, who held four different federal Cabinet posts, including Secretary of State under President Ronald Reagan. The elder statesman recruited Skinner as a research assistant for his memoir.

"Bob Keohane said, 'You'll never finish your dissertation if you do this book.' I thought I'm going to take the chance," said Skinner, who viewed this as a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. "Two years later, we had written 51 chapters and over 2,000 pages in draft. The value of that for me was that then my dissertation became easy. I think I may never have finished had I not had that kind of responsibility."

A SCHOLAR AND A LADY

Today, Skinner is a proven scholar and expert on all matters of international relations, international security, political strategy, and U.S. foreign policy. Within the Republican Party, she has met legends such as Henry Kissinger and Paul Nitze. Skinner has penned seven books, including two bestsellers, and served as a foreign policy analyst for Fox News. At CMU, she basically reshaped the landscape of the institution known for science, technology, engineering and mathematics.

Since her CMU arrival in 1999, Skinner orchestrated a whole new environment and curriculum around politics and strategy. Housed in the Institute for Politics and Strategy, the director and Taube Professor of International Relations and Politics heads several academic initiatives at CMU.

"What made our experience at Spelman special was that it was a place where African-American women could aspire for leadership without thinking about the conventional expectations around gender," said Moore, who recalled high-school friends getting degrees in nursing. "At Spelman, the push would have been to become a doctor."

In her short 57 years of life, this political influencer has accomplished so much. Always working on another book, the one thing she has not done is to get married and have children; however, there are no regrets. The always confident Skinner has only one comment.

"I think I've done what God set me out to do."

Amber-Joy Davis, C'2010, Finds Her Joyous Place

BY ALICIA SANDS LURRY

For as long as she can remember, Amber-Joy Davis, C'2010, wanted to become a kindergarten teacher. In fact, it was in kindergarten that Davis decided she would make her impact as an educator.

“Kindergarten was magical for me, but I’m a nurturing person, so I think I just enjoyed that age group,” said Davis, while sitting in a neat, brightly lit preschool classroom surrounded by colorful children’s books, toys and framed drawings. “Five-year-olds are just so magical; their imaginations are flowing, they’re sweet, kind, eager to learn, and eager to please and explore. That’s just who I am. I have always been deeply attracted to the energy of children and what they bring to the world. I love watching them grow and listening to their stories.”

The same innocence and wonder that Davis remembers as a child continues to guide her path today. As the proud owner of A Joyous Playce, a home-based preschool located in Atlanta’s Historic West End community, Davis prides herself in providing children ages 2 through 5 with a nurturing, play-based environment where they can thrive while connecting to their innermost joyous place. Located inside her spacious, historic craftsman-styled home, A Joyous Playce offers toddlers and preschoolers an opportunity to learn and explore through play and movement as they prepare for kindergarten.

During the half-day program, Davis’ young charges learn to count, identify numbers and colors, recite the months of the year and days of the week, as well as spell their names, retell stories from beginning to end, and learn how to clean up after themselves. She also teaches children critical social skills such as self-advocacy.

Amber-Joy Davis is owner of A Joyous Playce, a home-based preschool located in Atlanta’s Historic West End community.

“With all the standards being pushed, many children end up being left behind because they’re not ready for the academic rigor,” said Davis, who earned a master’s degree in reading education from Georgia Southern University and worked as a kindergarten teacher before establishing her own preschool in August 2018.

“I wanted to be a benefit to the community by starting a home preschool to begin introducing academics in a play-based environment to prepare students for kindergarten. I figured this would alleviate a lot of stress for 4- and 5-year-olds who are entering school because they will be academically prepared and have their self-esteem intact. Children deserve to enjoy their childhood, and they deserve to enjoy school.”

Advocating for children comes just as easy as Davis’ decision to become an educator. Fueled by her passion for children, Davis notes that attending Spelman ultimately helped shape the woman she has become.

“I wasn’t the typical Spelmanite, because Spelman wasn’t my dream school all of my life,” Davis recalled. “I actually ended up at Spelman because it was gated. That is the foundation of the story. As an only child, my dad wanted to make sure I was safe, and I loved it.”

“AS A STUDENT,
AMBER-JOY WAS VERY CONSCIENTIOUS, MOTIVATED, AND
INTERESTED IN BEING A CHANGE AGENT IN TEACHER EDUCATION.”

— L. OCTAVIA TRIPP, PH.D.,

Tripp, Ph.D., Davis is teaching the next generation of scholars to soar; and she is forever grateful for the impact her Spelman professors had on her life.

“Professor Farris was the highlight of my Spelman experience because I loved talking to her and learning from her wisdom, and Dr. Tripp brought new life to the curriculum that gave it a modern touch,” she said.

Tripp, who is now an associate professor in elementary education at Auburn University, said she always knew Davis would become a stellar teacher.

“As a student, Amber-Joy was very conscientious, motivated, and interested in being a change agent in teacher education,” Tripp said. “I’m really proud of her. It takes a strong, motivated and determined woman to open her own preschool. The mere fact that she took a seed and planted it shows how much she has blossomed. With that mindset, I knew she would be successful.”

As for what is next for Davis, she says her goal is for A Joyous Playce to eventually move to its own building and become one of the best preschools in the Southeast. Calling her home-based preschool a “dream come true,” Davis remains focused on teaching and shaping young children’s minds.

“I really want the world to be a better place, and it has to start with children,” she said.

AMY SHERALD

A PORTRAIT OF ONE'S SELF

Long before Amy Sherald became a household name for her official portrait of first lady Michelle Obama, the 1997 Clark Atlanta University graduate spent endless hours in the Spelman College art studio, where she studied under Arturo Lindsay, D.A., professor emeritus and former chair of the Department of Art and Art History at Spelman College.

“When we first met, Amy was a pre-med student, the daughter of a dentist with a soul of an artist that was begging and fighting to be freed,” Lindsay shared as he introduced Sherald at ART PAPERS LIVE. “I encouraged her to paint herself, to paint self-portraits as a way to find herself. And she did. She found her artist’s voice.”

Once she found her artist’s voice, Sherald became laser-focused on her career, coming to class early and leaving late. She painted on weekends, holidays and late nights. Painting late nights meant she and her close friend, author and illustrator Calida Garcia Rawles, C’98, had to find a way to bypass the Spelman art studio’s 9 p.m. closing time. They accomplished this by hiding in the restrooms until security made their rounds.

“They would go to the bathroom closest to the elevator and stand on the toilet bowls in the stalls,” Lindsay laughed as he retold the story he learned after the women graduated. “They stayed there until they could hear the ding of the elevator when the security guard was leaving. They then returned to the painting studio, working until the wee hours of the morning.”

It is this laser focus and perseverance that has resulted in Sherald’s success. She returned to Spelman College in February to discuss her exhibition at the Spelman College Museum of Fine Art, which is on display until May 18. Museum visitors were enamored with Sherald’s bright, stylized and fantastical portrayals of African-American life.

MUSEUM VISITORS WERE ENAMORED WITH SHERALD'S BRIGHT, STYLIZED AND FANTASTICAL PORTRAITURES OF AFRICAN-AMERICAN LIFE.

“They arrest you,” Anne Collins Smith, curator of Collections at the Museum of Fine Art, said of Sherald’s work as visitors snapped digital portraits of themselves with Sherald’s portraitures. “These aren’t necessarily portraits. These are archetypes. They’re a step up.”

Sherald’s signature grayscale portraitures and their whimsical titles serve as commentary on the complexity and performance of race and identity. Her interest in the performance of race and identity began after she returned to Columbus, Georgia, from Baltimore, and began to ponder how she had evolved. “My identity was based on a lot of repression, so I could assimilate into my environment,” she explained. “That’s when I really began thinking about identity as performance.”

Performance is notably absent from Sherald’s portraitures. “They’ve not compromised in any way.

They’re not concerned with performing,” Sherald said of the individuals she paints. She began painting individuals she encountered in her daily life after recognizing there was a lack of art in the American art canon of Black people simply being themselves. Her work fills this void.

Smith noted that portraits of Black people are uncommon in art history. “Sometimes we are afterthoughts, or in certain early photography, we’re like an image on the other side,” Smith explained. “But Sherald wants to center Black people.”

Sherald’s work and success is a testament to what art students can accomplish in the Atlanta University Center. “The Atlanta University Center was a great art center before it was mainstream, and here is a woman who came out of that tradition and surpassed mainstream success. That reinforces the necessities that nurtured her,” Collins shared.

Dr. Robbie W. C. Tourse, C'63, retired associate professor and director of field education, Boston College School of Social Work, was published with two co-authors in June 2018. Systemic Racism in the United States: Scaffolding as Social Construction, published by Springer, examines “major concepts that help explicate the systemic nature of institutionalized racism in the U.S. – with a focus on social construction, oppression, scaffolding, and institutional web – providing insight into racist thought and behavior that construct and mark people of color as ‘a problem.’ [...] I highly recommend this book for those who are engaged in working to combat domination and racism at the local, national, and global levels.”

— Gary Bailey, DHL, MSW, ACSW, Professor of Practice, Director of Urban Leadership Program, Simmons College School of Social Work

This important volume provides a powerful overview of racism in the United States: what it is, how it works, and the social, cultural, and institutional structures that have evolved to keep it in place. It dissects the rise of legalized discrimination against four major racial groups (First Nations, Africans, Mexicans, and Chinese) and its perpetuation as it affects these groups and new immigrants today. The book’s scaffolding framework – which takes in institutions from the government to our educational systems – explains why racism remains in place despite waves of social change. At the same time, authors describe social justice responses being used to erode racism in its most familiar forms, and at its roots.

A forceful synthesis of history and social theory, Systemic Racism in the United States is vital reading for practitioners and other professionals in fields related to human rights, social policy, and psychology. And as a classroom text, it challenges its readers to deepen their understanding of both historical process and current developments.

Since retirement, Tourse has been an adjunct professor at Simmons University School of Social Work in Boston.

Belinda Johnson White, Ph.D., C'76, has the perfect leadership tome for those searching for what makes a good leader. Focus in Action is Great Leadership: 10 Tenets of Leadership & Professional Excellence is a leadership development model for the millennial generation designed to build them into leaders and professionals ready to address 21st century challenges.

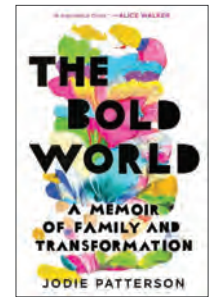

Through the Johnson White Leadership Model, Focus in Action combines leadership development and professional development, sharing the secrets to executive level leadership all with a focus on social conscience driven by faith, ethics and diversity.

Articulated as “FOCUS + ACTION = Great Leadership,” the JWLM concisely outlines the intrapersonal, interpersonal, and leadership skills that result in the betterment of individuals, groups, organizations, and society as a whole.

The JWLM is inspired by the work of Morehouse College sixth president, Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, mentor to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Dr. Mays said, “...we are all called by God to human betterment and enrichment. If we fail on those scores, we disappoint God, break his heart, and make Him cry.”

Jodie Patterson, C'92, learned early on to engage with her community for strength and comfort while growing up on Manhattan’s Upper West Side in the 1970s. But then in 2009, this mother of five had her world turned upside down. Realizing that her definition of community wasn’t wide enough for her own child’s needs, Patterson forced the world wide open.

In The Bold World, we witness a mother reshaping her attitudes and beliefs, as well as those of her community, to meet the needs of her transgender son, Penelope – and opening the minds of everyone in her family who absolutely, unequivocally refused to conform.

As we walk alongside Patterson on her journey, we meet the Southern women who came before her – the mother, grandmothers, and aunts who raised and fortified her, all the while challenging cultural norms and gender expectations. She shares her family’s history, particularly incidents within the Black community around sexism, racism and civil rights. We learn about her children, who act as a vehicle for Jodie Patterson’s own growth and acceptance of her diverse family, and her experiences as a wife, mother, and, eventually, activist. The result is an intimate portrait and an exquisite study in identity, courage, and love. Patterson’s relentless drive to change the world will resonate with and inspire us all, reflecting our own individual strength and tenacity, our very real fears, and, most of all, our singular ability to transform despite the odds.

Katherine R. Barner, C'93, knows that at some point, whether through the loss of a friend or family member, a decline in health, or the end of a career or a relationship, everyone will encounter grief. After nearly 25 years in the mental health field, the author and licensed professional counselor writes about the ways grief can impact a life in God Help Me, I'm Grieving.

A 2018 Reader's Choice award recipient, God Help Me, I'm Grieving is designed not only to assist readers through the process of grief but to grant them permission to fully experience it. It validates each reader's unique response to loss, allowing it to become a vehicle of inner change and spiritual and emotional growth.

While grief is unavoidable, it is also a valuable aspect of the human experience. Utilizing Biblical examples of human grief – and God's acceptance of its complicated rawness – Barner demonstrates how a person's response to loss does not indicate a lack of faith but testifies instead to their humanity and the life-affirming choice to love and be loved. Filled with practical tips for handling loss and avoiding contention with those who lack compassion or grieve differently, this valuable resource includes a section dedicated to navigating holidays and events while grieving.

Crafting this guide from her professional experience as well as from lessons learned during her own seasons of mourning, Barner offers compassion and guidance to those suffering a loss.

Hope Rias, C'96, in St. Louis School Desegregation: Patterns of Progress and Peril examines the history of the school desegregation movement in St. Louis. Underlining the 2014 killing of Michael Brown as a catalyst for re-examination of school desegregation, Rias delves into the connection between contemporary school segregation and social justice, probing the ways that "soft racism" – a term the author uses to describe the nonviolent, yet equally harmful, types of protests that opponents of desegregation utilized – has permeated St. Louis since the days of Brown v. Board of Education. The chapters feature the voices of those who were central to the desegregation fight in St. Louis, showing how the devastating effects of school segregation and soft racism linger today.

Andrea Hence Evans, C'98, is an expert on all things intellectual property. In All About Inventing, she writes about how to protect great ideas and inventions. While some inventors try to get patents to protect their intellectual property, they can make avoidable mistakes and spend unnecessary money, sometimes investing their life savings into inventions that are not patentable. They can even lose their intellectual property to invention-scramming companies.

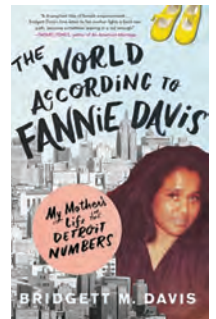

Evans, a former patent examiner at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and current patent attorney, has written this book to explain different types of patents, patent prosecution, how to avoid and correct rejections, and more. All About Inventing is written to help protect inventions and navigate the patent application through USPTO.

Tanell Vashawn Allen, C'2009, tells the journey of the ups and downs of a single minister learning to work out her own deliverance and how to embrace her calling to ministry in Let The Church Say Amen. The book celebrates her successes, displays her struggles, yet encourages her progress. In doing so, she invites you to embark upon a beautiful journey of self-discovery as you read this book. Allen does an excellent job illustrating that from time to time, even ministers sin and must rely on God's grace to launch them into greatness. She explores the possibility of what could happen, if the church really allowed true transparency to take place, in order to foster healing and deliverance.

Bridgett Davis, C'82, writes an engaging story about her mother in The World According to Fannie Davis: My Mother's Life in The Detroit Numbers. In 1958, the very same year an unknown songwriter named Berry Gordy borrowed $800 to found Motown Records, a pretty young mother from Nashville, Tennessee, borrowed $100 from her brother to run a numbers racket out of her tattered apartment on Delaware Street, in one of Detroit's worst sections. That woman was Fannie Davis, Bridgett M. Davis' mother. Part bookie, part banker, mother, wife, granddaughter of slaves, Fannie became more than a numbers runner: she was a kind of Ulysses, guiding both her husbands, five children and a grandson through the decimation of a once-proud city using her wit, style, guts, and even gun. She ran her numbers business for 34 years, doing what it took to survive in a legitimate business that just happened to be illegal. She created a loving, joyful home, sent her children to the best schools, bought them the best clothes, mothered them to the highest standard, and when the tragedy of urban life struck, soldiered on with her stated belief: "Dying is easy. Living takes guts."

A daughter's moving homage to an extraordinary parent, The World According to Fannie Davis is also the suspenseful, unforgettable story about the lengths to which a mother will go to "make a way out of no way" to provide a prosperous life for her family – and how those sacrifices resonate over time. This original, timely, and deeply relatable portrait of one American family is essential reading.

Spelman Visits Capitol Hill

BY SHARON OWENS, C'76

On March 27-30, 2019, 26 students and five staff members participated in the Ninth Annual Spelman on Capitol Hill Advocacy, Cultural and Educational Excursion. A partnership between the offices of Alumnae Engagement, Student Life and Engagement, and Spelman Student Government Association, the trip is made possible through the support of our sponsors and alumnae in the Washington, D.C., Maryland and Virginia areas.

Many thanks to Anita Estell, president and CEO of the Estell Group, for her passion of connecting Spelman students to members of the Congressional Black Caucus for job shadowing; congressional chiefs of staff members for allowing students to present their advocacy projects – healthcare, education, gun control, women’s health and criminal justice reforms; key political and nonprofit thought leaders, who led our students in a discussion on women and diversity; and trustee Gena Ashe, C’83, who served as keynote speaker for the Alumnae-Students Connections Luncheon.

In addition, through Estell’s C.E.L.I.E. organization and CBC, Congress has appropriated $500,000 for paid congressional internships this summer – 11 Spelman students have applied. I also want to acknowledge Ashley McNeil Coleman, C’2005, who has for the fourth year provided air transportation for our students through her McNeil Foundation; and Nicole Venable, C’91, who has facilitated the alumnae panel, Spelman Women on the Hill and Beyond, for the past eight years.

Donor Roll 2018

Fiscal Year 2018 (July 1, 2017, through June 30, 2018) was a record fundraising year for Spelman College. More than $45.6 million was raised. We are grateful for the generosity of each of our contributors and several new leadership gifts and commitments of more than $500,000 were made. These gifts help execute the strategic goals of Delivering the Spelman Promise, Elevating the Spelman Difference, Enhancing Operational Excellence, and Promoting Academic Innovation. Delivering the Spelman Promise – to ensure that no student is forced to suspend her education because she lacks the financial resources – is our No. 1 objective. These four objectives work hand in hand to uphold Spelman College’s standard of excellence. Please join us in thanking the FY 2018 Leadership Donors. Read more about our strategic plans at www.spelman.edu/strategicplan.

25@25 Aims to Level the Technology Playing Field for Spelman Students

When Gena Hudgins Ashe, C'83, a member of the Spelman College Board of Trustees, heard that the College's outdated technology infrastructure posed a disadvantage for students, she was moved to do something.

"I thought, if Spelman has done amazing things notwithstanding the technology — producing outstanding graduates and sending women to top graduate schools and employers — imagine the competitive edge our students would have if they had access to upgraded technology," said Ashe, president and CEO of GLA Legal Advisory Group.

So, she came up with an idea to raise money, teaming up with fellow board member Celeste Watkins-Hayes, C'96, who led a successful fundraiser in 2009 called 10@10. Watkins-Hayes, associate vice president for Research and professor of sociology and African-American studies at Northwestern University, recruited 10 alumnae to donate $10,000 each for Spelman's Women's Research and Resource Center. She surpassed her goal and raised over $350,000.

Ashe's goal is larger. She and Watkins-Hayes are recruiting 25 alumnae each who would donate $25,000 or more, for a total of 50 women giving $1.25 million for the Spelman Technology and Innovation Initiative. They also enlisted help from fellow board member, Cynthia "CJ" Jackson, C'81. So far, 45 alumnae have made gifts and pledged to the 25@25 campaign, which is not scheduled to end until June 30. For part 2 of the campaign, Gena has committed to identifying three corporations and/or foundations to each match the $1.25 million being raised by alumnae, for a total of $5 million.

Alison Graves-Calhoun, C'90, principal clinical specialist at Medtronic Inc., donated and recruited four other alumnae to do the same.

"When I was in college and graduate school, people had a choice about how much they wanted to be involved with technology. That is not the case today," she said. "Everyone has to have some level of expertise with technology to function in the world."

Alice Falconer Wilson, C'80, signed on to 25@25 because she believes technology innovation makes sense given the increasing interdisciplinarity of the arts and sciences.

"Technology is an integral part of every career field, not just the sciences," said Wilson, a physician at Cumberland Pediatrics. "I want all Spelman students to be exposed to technology, regardless of their major."

The money raised for STII will be used for technology fiber and network infrastructure upgrades, enterprise document and constituent relationship management applications, improved network security, and technology-enhanced active learning spaces.

"This funding model is based on building a network of alumnae to be stewards of their alma mater," said Watkins-Hayes. "Stewardship is about people positioning themselves to give larger gifts and making a long-term investment in Spelman."

That's exactly what inspired Kerstin Roper, C'2005, assistant director in the Bureau of Consular Affairs, to get involved.

"I participate in Spelman's annual giving cycles, and I'm always thinking of the best way to maximize my gift," she said. "I view my giving as more than charity. It's philanthropy — that's a totally different conversation."

Alumnae also like that 25@25 defines a specific way they can have a major impact.

"My goal is to donate at least $100,000 to Spelman by the time I retire," said Joye Lowman, C'96, president and CEO of Buckhead Urogynecology, who also supported the 10@10 initiative. "Having a direction for that goal helps me make sure my giving is productive."

To Ashe, there is nothing more productive than working to guarantee the success of future generations of Spelman women.

"If we want to ensure our students are competitive, leveling the technology playing field is the least we can do," she said. "25@25 is about making sure Black Girl Magic keeps coming out of Spelman College."
